

QUERIES & ANSWERS.

Date of Discovery and Opening Up of Luray Caverns.

THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG.

Was It Premeditated by Either of the Commanding Generals?—Letting of Mail Contracts—Patent Rights—Drexel Home, Etc.

Patent Rights.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Can a person make "for his own use" an article upon which there is a patent, without infringement or risk? L. A. P. No.

Manchester Ship Canal.
SCHUYLER, VA.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Please inform me what points does the Manchester ship-canal connect? M. E. P. Liverpool and Manchester.

Barbed-Wire Fencing.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
How many pounds of barbed-wire fencing will it take to run one strand a mile? H.
The regular barbed wire that is used for fencing purposes, which is the four-prong, thick-set wire, will run 52 pounds to the mile, one strand.

Luray Caverns.
RADFORD, VA.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Will you inform a reader of your valued paper as to the year in which the Luray caverns were discovered and opened to the public? "MORTON."
The Luray caverns were discovered August 12, 1858, and opened up to the public during the fall of the same year.

Saturday Half Holiday.
HARRISONBURG, VA.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Will you please answer through your paper what States have a law allowing Saturday half-holiday to banks? By complying with the above request you will greatly oblige. J. J. H.
New York is the only State that makes Saturday a half-holiday for banks.

The Death of Jackson.
RICHMOND, VA.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Please publish a copy of the poem, "The Death of Jackson," by Mrs. C. M. Jordan. I have a part of the above poem cut from your paper some time ago. By so doing you will greatly oblige. M. J. T.
Well, let me reader send us a complete copy.

Sending Coals to Newcastle.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Please explain the significance of the phrase, "Sending coals to Newcastle." Yours, A.
Newcastle-upon-Tyne, England, is the largest coal market in the world. To "carry coals to Newcastle" means to carry things to a place where they are already abundant; hence to perform unnecessary work; to lose one's labor, etc.

Battle of Gettysburg.
REEPFIELD, VA.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Was "the battle of Gettysburg" premeditated? I mean to ask if either one or both commanding generals had previously planned to fight at that place. My friends who have been arguing this question by answering the above question through your query column. W.
You would better read what General Fitz Lee says about it in his book. It is rather a long story.

Letting of Mail Contracts.
DRAGONVILLE, VA.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Please answer when the United States mail will be let to carriers for the next term, and how long will the contract for same last, and oblige, yours truly, A. SUBSCHIEDER.
The next general advertisement in the State of Virginia, for the contract term, July 1, 1896, to June 30, 1897, will be issued during the month of September, next.

Cadet's Time.
SADDLE, VA.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
At what time will the cadet's time expire who went to West Point, 1897? C. C.
The cadet at present representing the Fifth District of Virginia at the United States Military Academy, George W. Holmes, of Franklin county, will not graduate before June, 1897.

A Problem, Indeed.
MEARSVILLE, VA.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Please state through your paper if the answer given to the following problem is correct, and oblige. J. L. T.
A merchant buys 124 yards of calico, for which he pays 29 cents per yard. One half is sold at a loss of 6 per cent. How much did he gain?
This was given in uniform examinations, 1895-96.

Answer given by board which prepared same, $2.64 gain.
In the above statement is given what is paid, but not what is received. It would seem that something is omitted in the statement.
In the phrase "obliged to sell it," "it" may represent all the calico, in which the whole of it is sold at a loss of 6 per cent. Under this supposition of course there is no gain.
If in the phrase "obliged to sell it," "it" represents the one half damaged, then that half is stated to be sold at a loss of 6 per cent., but nothing is said as to what the undamaged half is sold for. Something must be omitted in the statement.

The Mary Drexel Home.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Please inform me what kind of an institution the Mary Drexel Home in Philadelphia is; what the inmates do, and what denomination it is? M. A.
In answer to our correspondent we copy from the last annual report of the home:
Every deaconess mother-house, our own included, is intended for the planting and development of the deaconess, and offers to Christian women who wish to devote themselves to this ministry of mercy the necessary training, the communion in the life of the sisterhood, and a permanent home. In the first place then, it is to be a training school where Christian women are fitted for this vocation. The necessary provision for this is made by a preliminary course for beginners and the continued instruction of all the sisters. Again, the mother-house offers all the blessings and advantages of a firmly organized and well-regulated community for the protection and assistance, the perfecting and improving of each individual. This communion rests primarily on the religious basis of a common faith and confession, and is constantly nurtured by the beautiful services of the Lord's house. Besides these blessings, which it has in common with every Christian congregation, the mother-house offers a compensation for the home and family life, which those who enter it have given up for the sake of their vocation. A loving confidence and willing obedience to their superiors, a sisterly attachment to their associates, give to the mother-house the desired atmosphere, and to the individual member a feeling of belonging to this great family, united by the bonds of common faith, love, and service. More surely, even than the family home, the mother-house secures to its daughters the protection of a home under all circumstances, especially in case of sickness or the enforced inactivity of old age. At the same time, the compact organization and strict order of the mother-house give to each sister the necessary wholesome direction and sound basis for her whole life-work. Even the less refined find their appropriate employment in positions that bring out their best gifts and qualities. Finally, the mother-house forms the centre from which those who come to it from different parts of the country for training can be sent out again wherever their services may be most needed and most efficient.

The institution is connected with the Lutheran Church General Council, inasmuch as the pastor must be a member of the ministerium of Pennsylvania and annually reports to that body on the work of the institution.
The inmates care for the old and feeble who are gathered in the home, teach boys and girls, and occupy themselves with various other works of charity.

Book Notices.
POLITICS FOR PRUDENT PEOPLE; OR, THE PHONOGRAPHY. By Slack Worthington. Boston: The Arena Publishing Company, 185. Paper back, 12 mo. 183 pages. Price, 50 cents.
This is not a book for cursory reading. It challenges in the outset thoughtful consideration in the definition of its new coined word Phonocracy "to express a meaning between Democracy and Plutocracy," and its bold assertion of the principles upon which a Phonocratic policy or government should be based. These principles are announced by the author to be:
1. All taxation to be direct and for revenue only, on fixed property only.
2. Cumulative taxation on this property held for exclusive private use.
3. No man to vote who cannot read and write English, and pays annual rent for his residence or taxation upon a residence owned by himself. Men of property to have cumulative votes in proportion to such rent or taxation.
4. The circulating medium to be based on fixed property, and redeemable in gold coin only.
5. Nothing to be done by the Federal Government which the local authorities are competent to do, and nothing by government that individuals can do.
6. The proper purpose of government is protection against foreign aggression, as long as separate governments exist, and against domestic insurrection, as long as a tendency towards that exists.
7. All systems of governmental or co-operative ownership, or management of business affairs to be discouraged.
Some of these appear to be pretty startling propositions, but the author relieves the situation somewhat by the assurance that this is not a proposal to change anything radically, but simply to suggest measures for relief along lines from which alone it is thought relief can come.

While the propositions of the author cannot be expected to command ready assent, they are able and instructive, and, in fact, the time necessary for a thoughtful reading of the book will not be unprofitably expended.
THE CHAIN OF GOLD; OR, LIN CRANFORD ROCKS. A Boy's Tale of Adventure on the Wild West Coast of Ireland. By Stanley O'Grady, author of "Finn and His Companions," etc. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co. 185. Cloth, 12 mo. $1.25.
The subtitle of this book is very descriptive in its suggestions. The wild West is so identified in our parlance with cowboy-life and Irish adventure is so associated with the rollicking pen of Charley O'Malley and Handy Andy, or the wide paths of Celtic pauper-life that we are ill-prepared for the entertainment in the reading of this book. The heroes of this adventure are two well-known boys, who, after the most perilous experiences in a fearful storm upon the Irish coast, are cast upon a rugged ridge bounding in caves. Their boat is lifted high upon the rocks, but, fortunately, so far preserved as to secure to the castaways some store of provisions and utensils, with which they are enabled to endure their escape. The description of the storm is graphically and powerfully written, and the narratives of their adventures during an imprisonment of months upon the ridge is told in a picturesque and entertaining style. To those, whether men or boys, who are fond of such literature as "Robinson Crusoe" and "The Swiss Family Robinson," this book will be a source of great interest and pleasure.

LITTLE A ROMANCE. By George MacDonald, author of "Donald Grant," etc. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co. 185. Price, $1.25, pp. 251.
We have perused through this work more from curiosity than from any interest which it inspired. If it is intended as a sort of allegory, or satire, we have been unable to appreciate its purport. It carries us back to the days of Adam and Eve, and deals largely with skeletons who talk, eat, and drink with cruelty, and death, and monsters. We are interested in what the author narrates about the "little ones," but even with them he connects a great many things that are absurd, and when he takes them up to Heaven, elephants and other animals are allowed to enter with them.
The most intelligible chapter in the book is entitled "a grotesque tragedy," and contains an account of an awful quarrel and fight between two nude skeletons—a man and neglected wife. She first ties up his right knee, but ends by breaking his other leg with a stick. Their recriminations border on vulgarity. The author may have intended this as a severe satire upon certain marriages in high life. The husband had been a lord.

THE SCALAWAG. By Grant Allen, author of "Blood Royal," etc. New York: The Cassell Publishing Company, 47 pages.
This work can be well recommended for its style, its story, and its import. Many persons might be misled by its title and be set to recalling that notorious character who figured amongst us during our awful days of reconstruction. But here we have something almost entirely English. A certain Philadelphia millionaire, somewhat of the above order, is introduced, and she tries to buy our hero, Paul Gascoyne, for the baronetcy to which he is entitled, but which the mismanagement and misconduct of his ancestors, including his own father, have rendered worthless. But Paul refuses to "walk into her parlor," marries a highly estimable woman, without fortune, and has to struggle for a living. At length he is enriched by the will of a curious man, who loved him. Then he and his New were reinstated in his barony and enjoyed and adorned his title.

THE SECOND JUNGLE BOOK. By Rudyard Kipling. Decorated by John Lockwood Kipling. C. I. E. New York: The Century Company, 324 pages. Price, $1.50.
Those who have read Kipling's "Jungle Book," which it has been well said, has become a classic in juvenile literature, will need no urging to peruse the present volume. The "Second Jungle Book," like the first, is addressed to children, but grown-up people will also take a deep interest in it. Eight stories make up the volume, as follows: "How Fear Came," "The Miracle of Purun Bhagat," "The Tiger's Claws," "The Undertaker," "The King's Ankus," "Quikern," "Red Dog," and "The Spring Running." And in some of them, old and favorite characters from the author's preceding effort in this field of fiction appear. There is a fascinating charm and mystery about the book.

FAMOUS LEADERS AMONG WOMEN. By Sarah Knowles Bolton, author of "Girls Who Became Famous," "Famous American Statesmen," "Famous American Authors," etc. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. 256 pages. Price, $1.50.
Mrs. Bolton has an exceedingly attractive style as a biographical writer. She has done a vast deal in that line, but has not lost her freshness by reason thereof. In "Famous Leaders Among Women," she gives us sketches of Madame de Maintenon, Catherine II. of Russia, Madame Le Tellier, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, Catherine Booth, Lady Henry Somerset, Julia Ward Howe, and Queen Victoria. An analysis of the character and striking incidents in the life of each is presented.

DEAR LITTLE MARCHIONESS. The Story of a Child's Faith and Love. Illustrated by W. L. Taylor, with introduction by Bishop Gallor. 60 pages. Price, $1.
The name of the author does not appear, but we are told that she ministered to the sick and the dying during the yellow-fever epidemic in Memphis, in 1878. The story is based upon that terrible scourge, and is most beautifully and most pathetically told. Bishop Gallor says of the book: "It will appeal to those who in passing through dark waters, have found their help and blessing in the unquestioning trust of childhood. It will comfort the young and old. The wide margins, charming illustrations, and beautiful illustrations, make this one of the daintiest volumes of the year."
"RICHARD FORREST, BACHELOR." By Clement R. Marley, author of "A Social Meteor." New York: Street & Smith, Publishers.
This is a readable story of life in America and Europe, and ends as all good novels should.

LEXINGTON.
Personal Notes—A Negro Boy Killed. The Revival.
(Correspondence of the Dispatch.)
LEXINGTON, VA., November 15.—Mrs. Gertrude T. Logan has returned home, after an absence of some weeks visiting friends in Salem and Winchester.
Mrs. D. B. Morien, of Clarksville, Va., has been the guest of Mrs. J. B. Spencer.
Miss Lelia McGuire, of Winchester, is the guest of Mrs. J. Randolph Tucker.
Mr. Sandy P. Fagat has secured a position on the mercantile establishment of Charles Broadway Rouss, in New York.
Dr. C. Graham Dodd, of Collierstown, has removed from Collierstown to Lexington and opened an office there.
Mrs. Mary B. Jackson, of West Virginia, is the guest of Colonel and Mrs. William T. Poague.
Mr. E. E. Vaughan, cashier of the First National Bank, is attending the Atlanta Exposition.
Mrs. Rebecca J. Snider, of Carroll county, Md., with her daughter, Mrs. Laura Tabor, of Battle City, Mont., is visiting Mrs. Elizabeth Snider, of the Rockbridge Hotel.
Colonel John W. Patton, of Gainesville, Fla., is visiting his relatives, on Timber Ridge. On his return he will take with him his mother, Mrs. Patton, who will spend the winter there.
Mr. S. P. Polidexter, class of 1895, of the Virginia Military Institute, is taking the post-graduate course in civil engineering at that institution.
Hutton Brothers, electrical engineers, of Lexington, have moved the Buena Vista electric-light plant from within the city to a dam above the city on North river, where water-power can be used. The new water-power and plant are giving entire satisfaction.
THE UNLOADED PISTOL.
Two negro boys—William Taylor and John Long, of Collierstown neighborhood—were at an apple-butter boiling, when a sham duel was proposed. Each had a pistol, and thought the cartridges had been removed. They began snapping the pistols at each other, when the pistol in the hand of William Taylor was discharged. The ball entered the brain of Long and killed him instantly. The shooting was purely accidental. A fine was imposed on Taylor for carrying concealed weapons.
The first of the public lectures at Washington and Lee University this session was delivered in the university chapel on Friday evening by Dr. Edward M. Scheffer, formerly physical director at the institution. His subject was "Physical Education," and was illustrated. The chapel was comfortably filled, and the lecture was enjoyed by all.
The wheat sown during the drought is coming up nicely, and the farmers are very much encouraged. But not a large crop was sown, as the ground was so dry, and would not permit of being ploughed.
As an evidence of the credit of Rockbridge county, the entire issue of the new 5 per cent. bonds was taken before last Saturday night, and there was an eager demand for more. Offers have been made to take a good many more thousands, but there are no more to be issued.
The great revival services at the Baptist church still continues.
Baptismal services were held at the church on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings, and evangelists were afterwards. So great is the interest that the meetings are continued from night to night, conducted by Rev. B. H. Dement, assisted by the pastors of the various churches in the town.
Additions have already been made to the several churches as the fruits of the meetings. Forty-five have joined the Baptist church, twenty-seven the Presbyterian, and three the Methodist.
Many have announced a purpose to join each of these churches, and a number the Episcopal church.
ESSENTIALLY UNION.
The meetings are essentially union in their character. All denominations mingle freely, and lay members of all churches are showing remarkable activity in working among the unconverted. The converts include all classes, ages, and conditions of people. It is stated that this revival equals, and probably surpasses, in interest and results, any ever held in the town. A great revival at the Presbyterian church, in 1845, during the pastorate of Dr. Skinner, is recalled when over 100 joined that church. Later a notable revival was the one held at the Presbyterian church in 1877, conducted as a union meeting, by all the pastors of the town. Drs. Mullally, Pendleton, and Doyle and Rev. Mr. Eagar. A notable revival was the one held at the Presbyterian church in 1881, by Rev. F. J. Prettyman.
The Buena Vista furnace is now running with full force. The furnace's output until January 1, 1896, has been sold at remunerative prices.
The Virginia Military Institute football team is now hard at work training for the coming game, to be played in Lynchburg on Thanksgiving-Day, with the team from the Virginia Agricultural and Mechanical College, at Blacksburg. The cadets make excellent subjects for training, for the discipline of the school fits them for it, and to this can be attributed their success on the gridiron. Regular hours, temperate diet, total abstinence from spirits and tobacco, and regular exercise under the immediate supervision of Captain Dickinson constitute another great factor of their success.
Simmons: You laughed at that dreary old yarn of Mudge's as if you really enjoyed it.
Timmons: I did really enjoy it. It is one of my own jokes—Indianapolis Journal.
Reliable under all circumstances is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the people's friend.

"77" COLD

No Two Alike.
The weekly announcements of "77" are like a row of raw militia, no two alike. 'Tis the same with Colds, sometimes it is a Cough or Sore Throat; or Catarrh, Influenza or Cold in the Head; or Soreness in the Chest, General Prostration and Fever; when nearly all these symptoms are present, then it is genuine GRIP.

"77" is the master remedy for all of these conditions. Taken early, cuts it short promptly. Taken during its prevalence, it prevents its invasion. Taken while suffering from it, a cure is speedily realized.
"77" will "break up" a stubborn cold that "hangs on."
